Creating an Internet Protocol (IP) tunnel across two devices may sound complicated, but SonicWALL has an IP Tunnel Manager application that makes it easy to create a VPN tunnel. Setup is a cinch. You simply define the IP settings that a remote user needs to connect to the VPN, and SonicWALL handles the IP routing and IP rerouting to ensure that traffic to and from the remote user is routed through the VPN. Once that's done, the remote user can connect to VPN resources as if they were on the same network. Because SonicWALL Global VPN Client works in tandem with the SonicWALL firewall, it creates a level of security that is hard to match, but its also easy to use thanks in part to its simple user-interface and point-and-click activation. Not only is it designed to be streamlined, its selection of management tools requires little tech support if any. Restart SonicWALL for the software updates to take effect. Note: If you are using a custom configuration with multiple VLAN networks, update rules apply to each VLAN network individually.  Please refer to the documentation for information about Feature Updates in your system's User Guide for the specific instructions. Please be advised, there are a lot of programs that claim to do the same thing, and in general their legality is questionable. i run a sonicwall network firewall and have used vpnc on linux and oracle vpn on windows for this. I have not had an issue with any of them, but have had issues with subnet issues, connection drops, wrong IPSec key exchanges or requests. I also know that many sonicwall clients are for home use so they may not be as reliable for business use because you tend to be behind more firewalls, or for that matter, vpn servers.
